this is an interesting place, completely settled in reggae. her specificity is burek. they have all kinds of burek, also vegan, but the menu is extensive, also veg pizza, salad, and rice and pasta dishes. I ate here twice, and also the veg rissotto once, which was delicious. it is very cheap. the owner offered us some free snacks while eating there with his family, which underlines the personal note of this restaurant... did not expect much here. it is not like plant-based food is here a thing (but they have a vegan burek, so I was excited to try it. Consistency was nice, but six euro maybe something pricy. I don't think they get many questions for this vegan burek so it took a while to get my order. service was very good, although (English works). and the whole place is full of poster famous reggae icons.
